HUGE DEMO PLANNED OVER ONE-WAY SYSTEM

CAMPAIGNERS plan to bring Welshpool town centre to a standstill with a major protest against the controversial one-way system.

Members of Welshpool Town Council say they will stand in the road and stop traffic in a bid to highlight their anger over the system. The call for drastic action comes just days before a crunch public meeting is held in the town to give residents the chance to town to give residents the chance to have their say on the traffic system. Councillor Phil Pritchard said he will lead a group of campaigners into the road during the National Eisteddfod week to disrupt traffic heading to the event. The councillor said it would "cause chaos" when Welsh Assembly ministers and dignitaries are heading to the event which will be held in the nearby village of Meifod in the first week of August.

"If we are to hold a protest let's do it then and cause chaos when the ministers are here," he said.

Councillor Heather Sherlock said she was worried the traffic system will cause a fatality in the town. She said: "One day there will be a crisis because the emergency services won't be

"Since then we have highlighted the changes that are needed and a survey of residents showed that most people would be happy with the system if changes were made. They haven't been made though.

The public meeting to discuss the one-way system will be held at 7pm on Monday at Welshpool Town Hall.

Stonehouse Brewery, based at Weston, Oswestry, has produced an ale called Up The Town for FC Oswestry Town. And the Black Lion pub in Salop Road in Oswestry is the only pub to sell this ale. Terry, 38, and Claire Rogers, 34, took over the pub two and a half years ago and said they had thought about the idea for a while. Mrs Rogers said: "It is a novelty having it here, because we are the only pub that sells it. Over the past few years, ale has lost its old man image and younger men and women are drinking it now."

The pub's connection with the club is vice-chairman of the football club.

He said: "It brings together three local organisations, the Black Lion, Stonehouse

Brewery and Oswestry Football Club to work together to put Oswestry back on the map.

"The brewery is very well known to the area. We organise a minibus to take people to the brewery tours quite regularly. One local who used to always drink lager went on the ur and has changed to drinking ale now."
Mr Rogers said the ale has the potential to become a part of the brewery's permanent line. As well as supporting local sports clubs, the Black Lion organises various community events and the next one will be a cheese and wine evening on June 27.

Representatives from the football club visited the Black Lion pub to help back the new ale.

Manager Nick Maguire and assistant manager Matthew Williams visited the pub to publicise the new drink. They were joined by Shane Parr, owner of Stonehouse Brewery.

Mr Rogers added that he was backing the Chronicle's We Mean Business campaign which celebrates Oswestry business. One of the key elements of the campaign is free of charge editorial profiles on the town's businesses. He said: "The campaign can only be a good thing for Oswestry and for business." Last week, Montgomeryshire MP Glyn Davies said he was confident the five wind farms that are awaiting a decision from a public inquiry will never become a reality. He said the wind farms, and more that are in the pipeline, would not be able to go ahead following the announcement by David Cameron that subsidies for onshore wind farms have been scrapped.

Meanwhile, it has emerged an announcement on the public inquiry into five wind farms in Mid Wales is not likely to be made until July. Sources say they believe the announcement will not be made until next month, although the Department of Energy & Climate Change says no date has been set for an announcement.

Motorist caused crash, rules court

A 20-year-old aspiring paramedic has been found guilty of causing a crash which left another driver with serious head injuries.

Benjamin Oliver Young, 20, had denied a charge of causing the crash on July 16 last year by driving without due care and attention.

But magistrates found him guilty after a trial at Welshpool Magistrates Court.

The crash on the A483 near Arddleen left Matthew Owen, from Oswestry, with serious injuries from which he has not fully recovered. Young was fined £110 and ordered to pay costs and charges of £520.

He was given three points on his driving licence.

Mr Owen suffered a fractured skull, eye socket and right hand, and had fluid leading from his brain which re-quired surgery on three occasions, the court heard on Monday.

Councillors rubber-stamped plans to allow the developers of Brogyntyn Hall in Oswestry to pay just £10,000 instead to allow them to start work as soon as possible, as the building requires "urgent action" to save it.

Councillor Malcolm Price, Shronshire Council's portfolio holder for Shropshire Council's portfolio holder for planning, said: "We went round to the site and you'd be surprised by the scale. Powys County Council announced last year it was reviewing the state of primary schools in Welshpool and nearby Leighton.

Welshpool Town Council's planning com-

Now councillors say they are concerned it could take trade away from the Berriew Street-based Morrisons store, leaving residents of the Oldford Estate isolated.

Authority chief defends area's planning system

SHROPSHIRE Council's planning chief has hit back at claims that major building projects are being passed "undemocratically".

The authority has come under fire in recent weeks as housing estates and a supermarket have been given the go-ahead by officers behind closed doors with-

Malcolm Price, Shropshire Council cabinet member for housing, said the planning department was taking a "kicking from all sides", and yet the process couldn't be more fair

His comments come after concern was raised by Oswestry Town Council after plans

BREEZE ABOUT TOWN

Had he been alive Bob Jones would have roared with approval at the site of the famous Vulcan Bomber soaring above his be-loved airport at Welshpool on Sunday as it made its farewell

Sadly Bob wasn't there. The man who dreamed about build-ing the Montgomeryshire Airport and came up with the idea of an annual air show died two years ago in a tragic flying accident in the hills above his home. My former classmate would have cheered louder than anyone else cheered louder than anyone else at the amazing spectacle, witnessed by 10,000 paying customers and thousands of others who found vantage points on hillsides above the airport. The Vulcan is being retired from flying because it no longer has the technical support required for the Civil Aviation Authority to allow it to take to the skies. But thanks to Bob's amazing foresight the people amazing foresight the people of Welshpool and thousands of weistpool and thousands of visitors have been privileged to see its final moments. WORKING FOR YOU

Regular readers of my column riegular readers of my column will know of my longstanding opposition to the Mid Wales Connection Project, which is currently being promoted by National Grid and international wind farm development businesses.

The implications for Mid Wales and Shropshire arising from this awful project are truly appalling if twere to go ahead. This column is an update.

I expect another fairly soon in what is a rapidly changing policy

The election of a new Government, moving from a coalition to a Conservative majority has transformed the position.

transformed the position.
In an answer to me in Prime Minister's Questions two weeks ago, David Cameron made clear that any proposal for a wind farm which did not have planning approval on Election Day, May 7, would not qualify for subsidy.

None of the proposals for wind farms which plan to feed into the new Cefn Coch hub and 40km

Without subsidy, every wind form is table under the property of the property o

At present, I cannot see how the Mid Wales Connection Pro-ject can go ahead. The only reason I'm not cele-brating already is that I've seen great victories snatched from the iaws of defeat before.

Jaws or defeat before.

Another interesting development is a possible change in where planning decisions about onshore wind will be taken.

It's thought that the Government is going to transfer the final decision about whether planning permission should be granted to wind farms to Local Planning Authorities.

This would also apply to Wales in respect of wind farms over 50

Those under 50 MW are already devolved to Powys County Council, with appeal to the Welsh Assembly.

Shockingly, in my view, the Welsh Government is currently planning to remove the power to decide 25-50 MW wind farms from the local council to itself—an act of shameless centralisation of power. This would produce a most unusual position.

sation of power. This would produce a most unusual position. In Powys, wind farms under 25 MW would be decided by the council; between 25-50 MW decided by Welsh Government; and 50-350 MW decided by the council. I suspect the central-ised officials in Cardiff Bay will change this before you can ut-ter the phrase "Centralisation of Power".

And I've not even mentioned the rumoured likely change in subsidy regimes. You will have to wait for my next update on this most contentious of issues.

WE ARE FOREIGN NATIONALS WHO MARRIED IN POLAND, CAN WE DIVORCE IN ENGLAND?

Q: My wife and I are both Polish. We married in Poland but have lived and worked in England since 2006. Unfortunately our marriage has now broken down and we have lived separate lives for two years but I would now like to divorce. As foreign nationals, do we get divorced in England or Poland?

A: The Courts in England and Wales have jurisdiction to hear a divorce suit only where: (1) both parties are habitually resident in England and Wales, or (2) both parties were habitually resident and one still lives there, or (3) the respondent is habitually resident in England and Wales, or (4) the petitioner is habitually resident in England and Wales and has lived there for one year prior to the petition being filed, or (5) the petitioner is domiciled in England and Wales and has been living in England and Wales for at least six months immediately before the petition is filed, or (6) both parties are domiciled in England and Wales.

It is, however, also possible that you may be entitled to file for divorce in Poland. Though whilst the Brussels II Convention which was introduced in March 2001 aimed to make the rules regulating divorce jurisdiction across all EU member countries (except Denmark) more consistent, the country in which you file for divorce could make a difference to your settlement. Brussels II also states that wherever divorce proceedings are first issued, that is where the divorce will take place. So it would be advisable to seek in-depth legal advice relating specifically to your full particular circumstances before you decide where to file. In the UK it is no longer possible to file for a divorce through the courts without first being assessed for Mediation. Some law firms, like GHP Legal, offer a Mediation service. Using such a firm ensures continuity throughout the full divorce process.

Inspired by these Christian martyrs

MANY readers will be aware that 20 Egyptian Christians were kidnapped, paraded and beheaded by Islamic State (IS) in Libya earlier this year.

However, they may not know of the absolute bravery of these true martyrs for their faith and I believe their story is worthy of the widest possible circulation as we so often take our freedom for granted. I was inspired and blessed by reading their story. These men knew that they were going to be slaughtered. They were denied the opportunity to speak last words to their loved ones in Egypt and one by one they were

At the site of the chairs is now a sign saying "seating around the corner". I questioned this with a member of staff who told me it was company policy not to have seating in the entrance area. Composer supports festival's message

Royal composer Paul Mealor says he is delighted to be a part of this year's Llangollen International Music Festival

ROYAL composer Paul Mealor has called on people to support the Llangollen International Musical Festival as he described it as a beacon of hope and peace in an increasingly troubled world.

Professor Mealor shot to international fame after writing Ubi Caritas et Amor for the wedding of Prince William and Catherine Middleton in 2011, and he also composed Wherever You Are, which became the 2011 Christmas number one for the Military Wives under the baton of Gareth alone. He will be attending the Llangollen

Eisteddfod as an adjudicator for the second time this year, and for the first time as a vice president of the event, on July 7. He said: "The Eisteddfod is a phenomenal and wonderful event. The whole world nal and wonderful event. The whole work comes to this beautiful little North Wales town to share music and culture.

"People might have differences, whether political or cultural, but they all speak just political or cultural, but they all speak just one language when it comes to music. And it isn't just about classical music but all sorts of genres whether it's folk, jazz, reggae or rock. It doesn't matter."

"This year, for example, the legend that is Burt Bacharach is performing. How is it possible that a festival in a little North

Wales town can attract world stars of that magnitude?

"That's what the International Eisteddfod is all about, it's just wonderful. Top quality musicians and performers such as Alfie Boe, Catrin Finch, Gareth Malone and a host of other top stars will be bringing won derful music to the stage. "It's always busy, whether working with my students or composing new music, but one of the highlights of the year is always angollen." Prof Mealor said the Eisteddfod showed the importance of cultural festivals

He said: "Funding in this day and age is always difficult but the festival stands for so much and it's vital it continues to go from strength to strength. I would encourage anyone who has never been to the festival to go along, even for just a few hours, to go along, even for just a few hours, and soak up what is just an amazing and unique atmosphere. Where else would you find people from all over the world brought together in a spirit of peace and tolerance and through a love of one common language – the language of music."

The Eisteddfod's musical director, Eilir Owen Griffiths, said: "I am thrilled that Paul is returning as an adjudicator this year."

By Michael Williams Published by Preface

Even if you are not particularly interested in railways, you can find much to enjoy in this book, as Williams writes well and engages you in his passion. It is billed as 16 excursions into the lost delights of Britain's railways, and it includes some of the quirky and hopeless lines of yester-year, and some of the other things which we have lost, like the boat trains, and cathedral-like railway stations. London has fared better than most in the last respect, but he particularly rues the needless demolition of Euston as it was and its

Heroes and heroines rose to the challenge Challenge Another view of Box and heroines are heroines are heroines and heroines are heroines and heroines are heroines are heroines and heroines are heroin

Tern Hill airfield was badly bombed in 1940

WHEN the bombs fell on Shropshire, the heroes - and heroines - of the county rose to the challenge. One of them was Miss May J. Weston, sub-postmistress at Tern Hill, who earned an official commendation for bravery for staying at her post during and after an air raid in 1940 on the nearby Tern Hill aerodrome.

nearby Tern Hill aerodrome.

"Tern Hill Post Office is very near to the airfield, but throughout the raid Miss Weston manned the telephone switchboard and kept the lines of communication open," a newspaper reporting on her retirement in 1961 noted.

"For this she received a commendation from the Destructor Covered for the singular barred during

"For this she received a commendation from the Postmaster General for 'conspicuous bravery during the air raid. Although bombs exploded within a very short distance of the office in which she was working a telephone switchboard she continued with commendable coolness to deal with the important telephone traffic which ensued."

The newspaper report says the raid was in the early hours of July 23 and tells how a Luftwaffe raider made a daring low-level attack on the airfield in which a number of bombs were dropped, and one hangar was badly damaged.

a uaring low-rever actack on the arrhed in which a number of bombs were dropped, and one hangar was badly damaged.

RAF Tern Hill's war diary confirms that there was indeed an air raid that day, but as it missed the airfield itself it seems likely that the newspaper has confused it with a much more serious attack a few months later. The war diary says that in the July raid bombs dropped half a mile away – nine in fields, one on the Tern Hill to Hodnet road, and one in a stream which did not explode. Damage was slight, temporarily blocking a road and blowing a few tiles off the railway station roof.

"At the time the training school was night flying, at least three planes being in the air, and all the usual flares and lights were lit. In addition, it was a brightly moonlit night. No alarm was given until 01.40 (i.e. ten minutes later)." The more serious attack was on the morning of Sunday, October 16, 1940, and an eyewitness told how he saw an aircraft low overhead and realised it was a Junkers 88.

"I was standing outside a hut on the south west side of the Station at the time and, realising what was about to happen, rushed into the hut and yelled that there was a raid on. Very few people believed me at the time and looked at me as if I was joking.

"But this time the Junkers 88 had turned and was beginning his bombing run. He released his stick of high explosive and incendiary bombs on the south west side of the Station in line with the three main hangars. The first bomb fell between the two most easterly hangars, destroying a wooden tower that had been intended as a bombing trainer.

ars. The first bomb fell between the two most easterly hangars, destroying a wooden tower that had been intended as a bombing trainer.

"The remaining bombs were far more destructive, smashing through the roof of the most easterly main hangar. They hit the concrete floor and then bounced back into the roof again before exploding. The subsequent fire and explosive damage was disastrous, the roof and the upper part of the walls of the hangar were completely demolished, leaving only the flight offices around the base intact.

"Eight Ansons and two Blenheim aircraft which were in the hangar at the time were also totally destroyed. Still watching, I saw the Junkers 88 pull up and after a tight turn begin a strafing run across the messes and domestic quarters. By this time everyone had realised what was happening and were frantically taking cover. Luckily the strafing run was broken off early and only superficial structural damage was done."

The German raider then flew off low and fast towards Newport.

MEMORY LANE

Bridgnorth in August 1940.

And now, with the 75th anniversary fast approaching of that tragic night which left scars on the town which rewhich left scars on the town which re-main to this day, an author and jour-nalist is suggesting that it is time to commemorate the two women who were killed by those Luftwaffe bombs. The bombing of Bridgnorth came during the Blitz, when a German raider, which was perhaps following the River Severn to find its way in the dark, unloaded a string of bombs across the town its way in the dark, unloaded a string of bombs across the town.

The two fatalities of the raid on August 29, 1940, were Mrs Elizabeth Hand, 68, of 9 Church Street, Bridgnorth, and Miss Mary Josephine Maynard, 62, of Cliff Cottages, Bridgnorth. It is a tragedy which has caught the interest of John Davies, who was brought up in Shrewsbury and has a lifelong passion for Shropshire history.

"As far as I know there is not a memorial to the two ladies who died and I thought that this year it would be fitting for the town to rectify that and remember the ladies, who I think must have been the first casualties living in the country, said John, town to rectify that and remember the ladies, who I think must have been the first casualties living in the county," said John, from Wheaton Aston.

"A total of 12 high explosive and incendiary bombs fell on the town at around 1.30am on that hot August night.

"Three explosive bombs landed close to St Leonard's Church. One struck Cliff Cottages occupied by two sisters and one of them, Josephine Maynard, 62, was killed. Another bomb hit a house in nearby Church Street killing 68-year-old Mrs Elizabeth Hand and severely injuring her husband.

"Their cottage has never been rebuilt and was turned into a memorial garden but I am not aware of any plaque in the town commemorating the two ladies by name.

"Other bombs landed at the junction of Pound Street, Listley Street and St Mary's Street severely damaging the Squirrel Hotel and nearby properties.

"Strange as to why the Germans bombed central Bridgnorth and not the RAF camp or the station, but two nights later they also bombed a house in Shrewsbury killing a woman and her two grandchildren.

or the station, but two nights later they also bombed a house in Shrewsbury killing a woman and her two grandchildren.
"An event to mark the ladies' sacrifice might be fitting on this August Bank Holiday weekend."

The Hands' cottage was next to the Almshouses where residents had a lucky escape. The Almshouses were rebuilt in 1950, but the site of the Hands' cottage was turned into a garden of remembrance.

Funds to build the garden were raised by Alderman J W C Bowers, while he was mayor of Bridgnorth, and it was opened by his successor, Alderman Percy Blackford JR on May 5, 1952. Members of the town's Inner Wheel presented a bench to be placed in the garden, reported to be made of wood from HMS Valiant which fought at Jutland in World War One.

One of those who survived the bombing was the then seven-year-old Ken Ritchie, who was woken by a whistling sound and

The Amulet Fairs event, which ran on Saturday and Sunday, saw all sorts of hidden treasures on show at the market.

At the fair, experts Anita Manning and Richard Madeley were offering their advice, while the BBC show's presenter Tim Wonnacott oversaw the sales and hunts for the best buy.

Market organiser Sheila Jackson said: "It is nice having them here because it does attract more people I think. We put it all on the adverts so people know they are coming.

The Bob Jones Memorial Air Show, held at Welshpool Airport on Sunday, was deemed another huge success by organisers.

Among the highlights was one of the world's most popular aircraft, the Avro Vulcan XH558, which was seen by crowds completing one of its final ever flights.

It passed over Welshpool, the Cosford Air Show and the Cholmondeley Pageant of Power.

Families and plane fanatics at the show enjoyed the Red Arrows, RAF Falcons parachute display team and a Typhoon.

"The Vulcan was really the star of the show, it is the last chance people will really have to see that.
"The Typhoon did a tremendous exit, he just blasted off straight into the clouds and disappeared – what a finale.
"The local girl Lauren Richards, who is from Llanfair Caereinion, in a red Pitts Special did the most amazing aerobatic display.
"All the displays were just outstanding. Unfortunately the headline act get grounded in bad weather in the south of England and did not get up – the Great War display team." There was added drama when one of the five Raven Display Team aircraft propellers struck the tarmac at the end of their display.

An abundance of life can be seen at this time of year

AT this time of the year there is ON THE an abundance of life, a surplus of living, a vivacity of flora and fau-

Much of that life is new and there-

Much of that life is new and therefore young.

An excess of such organisms mean that others can capitalise on it be it carnivorous predators and their prey or herbivores and their vegetation.

This means that the numbers of animals we might consider 'too high', for various reasons, tend to get even higher. I've heard many people of late saying there are too many badgers without once acknowledging there are too many people. Why on earth would you complain that there are too many badgers and not enough of other species, such as, for example, hedgehogs or wading birds? There are too few hedgehogs or wading birds? There are too few hedgehogs and not leaving enough wetland habitat for wading birds. There are too few hedgehogs and other wildlife because human beings have ripped out hedgerows (the clue's in the name), put down weedkiller and pesticides, used slug killer and built too many roads.

The reason there are too few hedgehogs has absolutely nothing to do with the fact that there are 'too many' badgers. Badgers and hedgehogs have interconnected roles together in the countryside. Humans have come in later and did the same thing at first, but rather than sharing it, we took dominion of it and changed it completely at first, but rather than sharing it, we took dominion of it and changed it completely with the aim of satisfying only ourselves. Of course we can give some species a helping hand (protect certain trees, ring fence rare habitats etc) but it is idiotic to instead blame any other species in the first place. It is instead important to inspire people to become a part of the UK's natural his-tory, understand it more fully (if only!) and stop passing the buck. June is a great month to excite and introduce our own speworld; for a start it's nice and warm! We can do that by seeking out accessible species and yet another 'marmite' one of those is and yet another 'marmite' one of those is the rabbit. Rabbits are one of Britain's most familiar mammals. They can often be seen in broad daylight, frequently in large num-bers and they can provide a great lesson in wildlife watching. This is especially the case as the young ones are born throughout the Spring and Summer. These kittens are born in nesting burrows, which the female (doe) lines with cross and fur. Just like many. lines with grass and fur. Just like many ground nesting birds, when the female leaves the nest to feed, she protects her young by sealing the entrance with soil and young by seaming the entrance with son and grass. So why not enjoy all the characters of the natural world around us this summer? If you're not lucky enough to have blue tits or blackbirds nesting in your garden, then might I suggest rabbits, even though, like us, they are not native to these lands.

Plenty of fun on § offer at village annual carnival

A FUN-packed spectacular is once again set to fit the streets of West Felton on July 12.

"This year we are inviting entries into the float competition from local businesses" explained Eileen Hamner, the secretary of West Felton Carnival Committee.

Eileen can be contacted on (01691) 610629.

The float judges this year are Dr Caron Moreton MBE who is the accountable officer for the Shropshire Clinical Commissioning Group and Mr and Mrs Wilcox, who are signwriters from Twyford.

"This year's entertainment includes a falconry display, Newfoundland dogs, a display by Border Counties gymmastics group, West Felton School Choir, the Porth-y-Waen Silver Band and in the craft tent a caricaturist, a woodturning display and basket making," explained Eileen

"There's truly something for everyone, including alpacas who will also be taking part in the parade around the village, plus clowns, a fun fair, a mini train ride and a first for the carnival – sumo wrestling in inflatable suits.

It's time for Essaouria to take the centre stage

IT'S always played second fiddle to big brother Marrakech, but thanks to a new direct flight route, this relaxed coastal town is set to this relaxed coastal town is set to take centre stage.

A four-hour drive west from Marrakech, Essaouira has always been a popular bolt-on, providing much needed respite from the intense pace of Morocco's most popular city-break destination. But a new direct four-hour flight with easyJet from Luton means tourists can bypass the chaos (should they want to) and come straight to this sleepy coastal town.

I've based myself at the Sofital Mogador Golf and Spa Hotel, a 10-minute drive from the centre, with views to the Atlantic Ocean. Although elegant and modern, the property has many traditional touches, like a blue mosaic bath, serving as a partition in my spacious open-plan room.

But most of the action (if you can call it that!) takes place close to the seafront medina, a UNESCO World Heritage Site recently used as a film location for Game Of Thrones. Alongside the tourist-friendly shops, selling ceramics, leather goods and carved thuya wood furniture, the busy main drag (no cars are allowed but you still need to watch out for bikes zipping by) is lined with stalls stocking essentials for the medina's full-time residents.

The town is also packed with traditional house—with stalls stocking essentials for the medina's full-time residents.

The town is also packed with traditional house – riads. I duck into the cool, spacious courtyard of one of these intricately tiled homes for my first taste of the country's most famous drink. the country's most famous drink. Also known as the whisky of Morocco (but without the booze, obviously), fresh mint tea is served in gilt-edged glasses and poured from a height to create the all-important foamy head. It's wonderfully sweet and refreshing and I quickly develop a five-cup-a-day habit.

Back outside, I venture further along the shore where bright blue fishing boats are bobbing in the harbour, having completed their daily trawling trips. Fishing is Essaouira's primary industry, and fresh seafood stalls can be found all along the waterfront. At La Chalet de Plage on Avenue Mohammed V. we grab a table on a verandah overlooking the sea and order huge platters of deliciously salty oysters, meaty prawns, sizzling calamari and spiky sea urchins, while the waves lap below. It's all washed down with glasses of local wine (not bad at all), while owner Jeannot tells a story about the time Jimi Hendrix paid a visit. Everywhere you go in Essaouira, tales of the rock legend's sojournhere in the summer of 1969 abound: he played his guitar on this beach, he stayed in that room, he wrote the song Castles Made Of Sand here. Who knows whether the guitar hero actually did sip a beer at La Chalet, but after a boozy lunch, we're willing to give adorably animated Jeannot the benefit of doubt.

After sunset, the streets are buzzing as I make my way to the Hotel Biad Al Madina for a taste of Gnawa.

but atter a boozy funch, we re willing to give adorably animated Jeannot the benefit of doubt.

After sunset, the streets are buzzing as I make my way to the Hotel Riad Al Madina for a taste of Gnawa, traditional music from sub-Saharan Africa.

During the windy season, from April to September, Essaouira is a water-sport paradise. Kite-surfing looked tricky for a beginner, so I decide to have a go at short board surfing. A bronzed surfer dude from the Explora Adventure Centre explains the basic technique, but I don't rate my chances of getting upright once I'm in the water. It's seriously fun, and gives me a new appreciation for the 'windy city of Morocco'.

If you're looking for non-stop sunbathing weather, Essaouira's breezy climate might be off-putting, but for me it's a small price to pay. In fact, perhaps it's the cool breeze that gives the town its laid-back demeanour... I can see why Hendrix liked hanging out here so much.

Jersey offers the best of both worlds

THE woman's face beamed with excitement as she nudged her travelling companion so hard she spilled her drink.

"Oooh," she cooed in full Les Daw-son mode, "He's off to Jersey! It's like son moue, the soft to Jersey! It's like stepping back in time to a really nice part of England, 50 years ago."

"Wolverhampton, 1965?" I offered, smiling. She looked confused. Then, bizarrely, offended.

offended.

She frowned and turned to mop up spilt coffee. Conversation over. I wasn't trying to be funny madam – honest.

But the lovely old lady wasn't the first person to point out Jersey's nostalgic charm and the island itself has quite rightly played to the other departs.

and the island itself has quite rightly played to its strengths.

Just 50 minutes (45 with a tail wind) from Liverpool, the Channel Island has made the most of its unique political and social circumstances to maintain its Anglo-French character, with the best of both worlds. It has British shops, people speak English, everyone is very friendly and they do nice beer.

itised the best thing our Gallic neighbours have offered the civilised world – a focus on good food. Really, really good food.

"Where are you stopping?" asked our taxi driver with a Black Country twang buried deep in his Jersey burr (turns out he left West Bromwich 40 years ago and never went back). When I answered 'The Club Hotel and Spa', he nearly crashed the car in his desire to tell us how good it was.

"Have you got into Bohemia?" he said, "Best restaurant on the island. People come from all over to go there – apparently it's amazing."

amazing.

He was still raving about The Club's Michelin starred restaurant 20 minutes

Michelin starred restaurant 20 minutes later as we arrived at the hotel, perched neatly on a gentle rise just a few minutes walk from St Helier's historic town centre. The reception staff were friendly and relaxed, which is not always the case at five-star boutique hotels, especially in our own fair capital.

We were given a useful tour of the hotel and spa and shown the 'honesty bar' where guests can help themselves to after hours drinks – and management trust them to pay accordingly in the morning. The weather was bright, but showery as we set off to explore the town where all roads lead to the sea.

The dinner menu ranges from a sixcourse surprise tasting experience (£49) through to the Prestige menu at £85 per head. There are also pescatarian, vegetarian and another tasting option, all at £75

This may sound expensive and it is, by West Midlands standards. But if you love good food, it is worth every penny. Anyone lucky enough to sit down for a Bohemia dinner will have their own favourites, so I list mine purely as an example of the delights

We started with turbot, razor clams, cauliflower, brown butter and sorrel, before a main course that was so perfect it's hard to describe. The elements were braised beef and fillet, white asparagus, morel and red wine. The result was a meal that will last

Rounding it off with sumptuous straw-berry cheesecake, champagne and basil was just decadence on my part, but by that point was past caring.

Of course, no matter how good the food is, service and setting have to just right – and again neither could be faulted. And, finally, the service; from the warm greeting finally, the service; from the warm greeting when we arrived to the friendly advice over choices, all the staff were first class.

Similarly, The Club's spa also hit the high notes, offering relaxing treatments in a modern, luxurious setting that puts you at ease the moment you step through the door. The following day, we set out through the town to Elizabeth Castle, built on a rocky islet in St Aubin's Bay just down from the

We made it back to the Club just in time for afternoon tea. What used to be a quaint tradition is fast catching on as a fashionable get-together for young and old alike and hotels have been battling it out to gain the finest reputation for sandwiches, cakes and some of the best brews around.

Offering the best bits of England and France, your trip to Jersey should be a shore thing.

A KITCHEN company in Shropshire has opened a new showroom as part of a ma-jor investment in the business. Family-run Kitchen Revivals has made a six-figure investment in a new showroom and workshop at Vanguard Way on Battlefield Enterprise Park in Shrewsbury.

The new site will allow the company to showcase the services it provides in refit-ting and redesigning domestic kitchens. The company is also set to move into a new area of the household – potentially allowing it to begin employing staff later in the year. The move is aimed at encouraging 20 per cent growth during the course of 2015

Following its growth in kitchen make-overs, and responding to an increasing demand from customers, the company is now launching a bedroom make-over service, including a full initial consultation to discuss exact requirements, followed by the creation of individual furniture Company proprietor Darren Smith said: "We have had three very successful years in the kitchen sector, working with customers who possibly think that they have the simple replacement of doors, drawers, worktops and appliances, saving a great deal of time and money.

"However we do also still offer a full design and build service for complete new kitchens. "Being agents for high-quality Neff ap-

Over the course of the next two years, businesses which employ fewer than 30 people will meet their staging dates for auto-enrolment on workplace pensions schemes.

"Companies may not have received their staging date yet, but they still need to be aware of their obligations. "Ideally, they should be seeking advice on how to comply with the new rules at least 12 months before their staging date, otherwise they will risk breaching the regulations."

It is now putting the final touches to its latest investment, worth £15.2 million, which will see the company putting in four massive new transfer presses into Telford, and turning its Shrewsbury factory into a "fully equipped Assembly Centre of Excel-lence". The first of the new presses was due to go into action in the first half of this year, producing parts for the new Jaguar XE.

And it is the company's relationship with JLR, and OEM which is riding the crest of a wave of success at present, that provides a positive outlook for the future for pressings company Stadco.

"The outlook for 2015 remains positive and confidence remains strong that customer forecast volumes will remain resilient and in line with management ex-pectations," it said in a statement along with the accounts.

"Although the European automotive sector continues to face economic challenges, a significant proportion of production relates to Jaguar Land Rover, whose models continue to sell well both in the UK and global markets."

The vast bulk of Stadco's business was achieved in the UK over the course of 2014, with £195.6 million of turnover generated

Poland was the second largest market with £2.6 million of business, then Sweden (£2.3 million), Spain (£1.2 million), Germany (1.1 million) and the rest of the world (£237,000).

All regions except Poland enjoyed growth in turnover compared with the previous

"Production revenues generated in the manufacturing facilities increased by 20 per cent, driven by new business and increases in customer volumes on existing business," the statement added. Stadco employed just under 900 people on average during the course of the year, a fall of around 10 compared to the year before.

Investment from overseas boosts region

THE West Midlands enjoyed higher levels of foreign investment than at any other time in the last decade in 2014 - with Shropshire playing a key role.

The 65 foreign direct investment (FDI) projects in the region represented a 38 per cent increase on the same point in 2013, according to new research by accounting giant Ernst and Young.

Young.
Shropshire contributed seven of those projects, with four in Telford, one in Wellington, and one each in Shrewsbury and Oswestry.
That figure eclipsed the neighbouring Black Country, where foreign investors chose to back only three projects – one each in Wolverhampton, Walsall and Sandwell. Birmingham was the third best performing location outside London, with 15 projects – but Telford in particular compares favourably to its more decorated city neighbours.

Sara Fowler, senior partner at EY in the Midlands, rated city neighbours.

Sara Fowler, senior partner at EY in the Midlands, said: "It's been an exceptional year for the West Midlands with record project numbers creating more jobs, which has contributed to 2014 being the most successful year for the region in a decade."

Among the projects which have seen cash injected into Shropshire's economy, wheelie bin maker Craemer and food giant Heinz have both invested in their operations Telford's Hortonwood Industrial Estate.

Two of the Telford projects come from Japanese print business Ricoh, which has opened a multi-million pound Customer Experience Centre and Smart Factory

The UK's largest dealership show is hosted by caravan dealership Salop Leisure, whose accessory shop reported a 25 per cent increase in sales.

The number of holiday homes and luxury lodges sold was 10 per cent up, while touring caravan and motorhome sales and takings in the Love Coffee restaurant were both slightly

Alert after pollution incidents hit farms

FARMERS are being urged to ensure they are storing their silage, slurry and diesel appropriately following three major pollution incidents.
Officers from Natural Resources Wales have recently dealt with two major slurry pollution incidents and a serious farm diesel spill.

incidents and a serious farm diesel spill.

Slurry and silage effluent is a strong pollutant removing oxygen from the water, killing fish and water insects. Fuel oil can affect birds and other river life.

NRW has produced a guidance leaflet which helps explain the legal requirements within the Silage, Slurry and Agricultural Fuel Oil Regulations. The guidance leaflet has been issued to the farming unions and is also available on the NRW website.

The environmental impact of the three incidents could have been much less had NRW been contacted earlier. NRW is requesting that farmers report such incidents or accidents immediately on 0800 807060.

Reporting the incident quickly will allow officers attending to offer advice and support to try to help prevent or reduce the environmental impact rather than spending time trying to identify the source.

Phil Morgan, Catchment Co-ordinator at Natural Resources Wales said: "We've been working closely with farmers for many years to ensure silage, slurry and agricultural fuel oil on farm is being stored appropriately."

"However these recent incidents highlights that there is still some work to be done. Prevention is much better than cure, but some incidents still happen. If they do, the best thing any farmer or contractor can do is contact us immediately.

"We will then provide help and advice on how to prevent or reduce the environmental impact of the incident rather than spending time trying to identify the potential source." The guidance can be found on the Natural Resources Wales website http://natural-resources.wales/media/4344/ssafo-guidance-leaflet.pdf

More focus on varieties is required

PHOMA stem canker is still the most significant and costly disease in oilseed rape and, with increasing pressure on margins in oilseed rape, growers should be selecting their varieties with multigene resistance to this disease and saving on expensive fungicides.

The HGCA Crop Monitor registers Phoma leaf spotting last year affecting 100 per cent per cent of crops in the South East, 95 per in the East, 90per cent in the South West and 89 per per cent in the Midlands and West. Even in the North, over 75 pe cent of crops had Phoma.

"This disease can cause premature death of the plant and yield losses up to 50 per cent. Where control is lacking, losses of between 0.5 and 1t/ha are common," says Neil Groom, technical director of Grainseed.

Ratings

Neil says that growers need to be looking more carefully at resistance ratings for stem canker when select-ing varieties for this coming year.

"If you look at the past ten years of the HGCA vari-

If you look at the past ten years of the HGCA variety listing, the overall trend is for more varieties with poorer Phoma ratings. The analysis shows more varieties with a 4 rating (in 2015/16 there were 31 per cent of varieties with this rating, whereas in 2006/07 19 per cent had a 4) and more with just a 3 rating (12 per cent in 2015/16 and none in 2006/07).

in 2015/16 and none in 2006/07)."

Neil thinks that it is concerning that fewer varieties Neil thinks that it is concerning that fewer varieties have good resistance rating to the most damaging disease of rape.

"There should be a stronger focus on durable disease resistance in the future," he said.

Power lines – wayleave or easemen granting easements for overhead power lines?

Roger Bedson of Hinson Parry & Company responds: For well over 20 years we have been settling claims against utility companies for the presence of overhead power lines (and indeed other utility apparatus) upon clients' land.

paratus) upon clients' land.

The claim for power lines is predominantly for the effect of 'injurious affection' to the property due to the presence of unsightly pylons and power lines.

Despite reports to the contrary there are still perceived associated health risks with high-voltage overhead power lines which again translates into an effect on value.

The question is, should you release that injurious affection into your bank account by granting an easement or should you by granting an easement of should you leave them as they are?

As ever, each case is different but the fundamental principles are that where landowners are receiving rent for overhead electric lines there is usually a wayleave agreement in place. Whilst this wayleave can be terminated by a 'Notice to Quit', that does not mean that the electricity company will simply take their equipment away. A further step has to be taken by the service of a 'Notice to Re-move' under the Electricity Act 1989 but move under the Electricity Act 1989 but even then the electricity company can lodge an application to the Department of Energy and Climate Change for a further wayleave (called a 'necessary wayleave') to be enforced upon the landowner. Generally speaking, the inspector within DECC will tend to favour the electricity company's need to supply power for the company's need to supply power for the public good over a landowner's require-

The NFU and farmers share this ambition and we have argued strongly that we need such a plan to reverse long-term declines in farming productivity and the nation's self-sufficiency. So we are eager to begin working as soon as possible.

None of this has happened by accident.

To achieve this, farming needs to work closely with Government, focusing to ensure that more markets are open to British products and that our farmers are able to compete in the marketplace.

also mean even lower running costs.

Key to the Peugeot Partner Tepee's appeal is its generous interior space and exceptional practicality. Multiple configurations mean people, cargo or both can be carried with ease. Children can be dropped off at school Monday to Friday then bikes can be shipped to the countryside at the weekend.

Agila Europe's most reliable

Whilst applauding the Vauxhall Agila as 'Europe's most topping performance of the diminutive Vauxhall Agila in the latest research by reliable car,' award-winning Vauxhall dealer Arthurs is full of praise for the model range as a whole.

"We are very pleased about the Agila's accolade which is well deserved, but it is no great surprise as all Vauxhall models have dramatically improved in quality and performance," said Arthurs group operations manager Steve Hughes.

European-wide Warranty Direct's Reliability Index.

High

Steve said: "The Index analyses vehicles which are on average five years old with mileages of 50,000.

"Warranty Direct's managing mirector David Gerrans has said it is good to see a British car manufacturer at the top of the table - especially at a time when Britain's automotive industry is flying high.

"The Vauxhall Agila is a small car that's surprisingly practical and has real personality.

"That the Agila has been named as Europe's most reliable car is very pleasing of course and we are finding the amount of warranty repairs that need to be carried out are very low and fewer than other manufacturers.

"At the same time, the whole Vauxhall range has improved dramatically." added Steve whose operations responsibilities include both Arthurs Oswestry and Newtown branches.

By Graham Breeze

Back in the heady days of the late 1960s my late best mate was often the centre of attention in his gleaming Viva so I wonder what he would have made of today's reincarnation of the old Vauxhall favourite.

His souped-up model had the lot including wider wheels and even go-faster stripes and we enjoyed many a motoring adventure on the country roads of Mid Wales and Shropshire.
Sadly my pal Clive died in a motoring accident but I think he would have been impressed with the makeover Vauxhall has unveiled to his prized possession – even if it no longer suits drivers looking for thrills.

The name vanished but is now back in showrooms as a city car segment competitor, representing value for money as Vauxtious, price conscious motorist. Viva fits the bill perfectly and is the epitome of value for money with prices starting at under £8,000, with even the top-spec model coming to the showroom at less than £10,000.

Even the basic SE getting five seats, electric front windows, cruise control and a trip computer. The top-spec SL gets climate control, Bluetooth and alloy wheels and you only £2,000 more.

Viva joins Vauxhall's growing small-car family, which already includes ADAM and Corsa, but is clearly defined from these models by its value, range and dimensions.

There's no mistaking Viva is a Vauxhall as the latest model in the range to display the company's sculptured design philosophy. Three strong feature lines swoop down the sides with the signature 'blade', seen previously on Insignia and GTC, slicing through the doors. The two others run through the front and rear door handles while the front end features a distinctive winged chrome bar that presents the Griffin badge.

This design is a great looking feature but you do wonder what the cost of repairs would be to any damage to the side panels.

Large headlights and taillights are added to create a design that shows a lot of attention to detail for a vehicle in this class.

Under the bonnet of all models you will find the same 1.0-litre three-cylinder engine, with 74bhp and 95Nm of torque while the SE models get ecoFLEX trim, adding low rolling resistance tyres as well as front and rear spoilers, dropping C02 levels below the road tax threshold. The one-litre engine is part of Vauxhall's large-scale engine offensive, which started last year and will bring 17 new powertrains to market before 2018.

'It's always a risk when a manufacturer resurrects a model but the new Viva is so far removed from its predecessor it doesn't really matter.'

The 1.0-litre ECOTEC (75PS) is the base engine of a new generation of small Vaux hall petrol engines. The next more powerful version is the 1.0 ECOTEC Direct Injection Turbo that has been available in ADAM and Corsa with an output of either 90PS or 115PS. Vauxhall says all models will do 60mpg on the combined cycle though on test it was closer to 50mpg. Inside there's plenty of room for four people and a 206 litre boot which would not pass the golf club test. It's comfortable enough up front, though there's only tilt adjustment to the steering column which means sliding the seat in and out or up and down is the only way to get cosy.

It's always a risk when a manufacturer resurrects a model but the new Viva is so far removed from its predecessor it doesn't really matter.

The three cylinder engine lacks a bit of firepower but this Viva is aimed at a motorist with economy in mind rather than mph.
With ADAM and Corsa already out there

Vauxhall will have to be careful not to become recognised as a small car producer.

Motor writers attempt world

A pair of motor journalists will attempt to set a world record for the number of countries visited on one tank of fuel.

The 'carefully planned route' will start in the Netherlands, pass through Belgium, Luxembourg, France, Lichtenstein, Switzerland, Austria, Germany and Italy before heading towards the Balkans.

At the wheel of the Audi A6 TDI Ultra making the attempt will be respected freelance journal-ist Andrew Frankel and part-time racing driver Rebecca Jackson, who also co-presented I Want That Car on ITV4. Using the hashtag #RecordRoadTrip, the duo will try to make the most of the A6 Ultra's 73-litre fuel tank and theoretical ability to record 67.9mpg on average.

With careful cruising at modest speeds they should be able to average economy in the 70s or more.

The RAC is backing the project, which will start or the Continent as sea or channel crossings are not allowed under the official world record rules.

RAC #RecordRoadTrip co-ordinator Simon Williams said: "We're confident the combination of two skilled drivers, a highly fuel-efficient Aud A6 Ultra and a route that takes in the most possible countries in the least fuel-taxing way will lead to a hard-to-beat record that covers at least 10 countries, hopefully more,"

Jon Zammett, head of Audi UK public relations said: "With the RAC we are planning a serious re cord-setting run with all the detailed planning you would expect from a German car maker.

"At a time when MPG is a top priority, we are using an A6 Ultra to set a new world record, using real world parameters. It's truly astounding how efficient our executive car can be in normal use.

B 5	- TOTAL	Shrewsbury Up & Comers Football Club	9.3
NA.

Shrewsbury based award winning junior football club Shrewsbury Up & Comers and Passmaster Coaching Shrewsbury are working in partner-ship to deliver a new brand of coaching classes to budding four and five year old children in Shrewsbury. Up & Comers Chairman Simon Lee says "We currently have well over 300 boys and girls playing football for the club every Saturday and Sunday in the football season from the age of six upwards, we also operate with Passmaster Coaching a very successful Kickers Club for boys and girls in year's 1 and 2. However due to demand from parents, we are now planning to deliver a Mini Kickers Club where four and five year old boys and girls can get there first organised introduction to football. We are delighted that Steve Green of Passmaster Coaching with his coaching staff have agreed to deliver the sessions for us, inside what we know will be a fun and learning environment for the children at the new 4G facilities at S.C.A.T. in London Road, on Tuesday evenings between 5.30-6.30pm." For further details contact Simon Lee on 01743 355807 or 07815 361511 or Steve Green Passmaster Coaching 07503 260041 e mail stevepassmastercoaching@gmail.com

Ellesmere beat weather and win

ON a day ravaged by the rain, Ellesmere managed to beat the weather as they made up ground in the Shropshire Cricket League division two with a winning draw at home to Wellington III.

Put in to bat after losing the toss, Ellesmere progressed to 190-9 off their 35 overs, before restricting their visitors to 133-4 by the close to collect 15 points

With the majority of teams sidelined by the elements, the result lifted the Meresiders up to fifth place in the table – and they will be out to maintain the momentum at lowly Prees on Saturday.

Consistent batting throughout helped them post 190, with Graeme Cowey top scoring on 35, with a six and five fours, after openers Jonathan Mitchell (26) and Jack Cockayne (21) had made a solid start.

Laurence Ashley, at No7, maintained the momentum with 29 while 20 extras also boosted the cause.

David Ross was the most successful of the Wellington bowlers with 4-48 from eight overs while ben Keeble claimed three victims.

Despite Ashley Thomas (2-32 off 11 overs) taking a couple of early wickets, Ellesmere were held up by a defiant third wicket stand between opener Ryan Barnett, with 47, and wicketkeeper Matty Simmonds, who finished unbeaten on 56 as Wellington closed on 133-4 to ensure a draw.

Fraser Duncan also performed well with the ball in taking 2-20 from seven overs.

Jason Brookes cracked 74 not out as Frankton posted 212-5 in 50 overs, skipper Danny Evans hit-ting 55 and opener and the league's player of the month Dave Powell making 35.

The game was well balanced with Reman reaching 98-3 in reply, opener Connor Cheshire going well on 68 not out before the rain had the final say.

Morda Road hosts thriller in T20 Cup

A BIG crowd went home disappointed as Oswestry lost by just five runs to Shrewsbury at Morda Road in the second round of the Birmingham League T20.

The home side put in a great effort, especially Michael Johnson, whose unbeaten 78 took Oswestry so close to a famous victory.

The Morda Road bowlers did superbly to keep Premier League giants Shrewsbury down to 148-6 after the visitors' big guns Anthony Parker, Rob Foster and Ed Foster had looked like setting up a huge Oswestry did well to dismiss all three, and Shrewsbury never really got away from the home side after that.

Stand-in skipper Alex Huxley then showed vastly improved form in a spirited knock of 22 as he and Johnson set up an exciting finish. But the Aussie's heroics weren't quite enough, and it ended up a case of "what might have been." Oswestry III are also in T20 action tonight (Thursday) when they travel to Wellington III for the semi-final of the Lynx Shropshire Junior Slam

Clarke is set for juicy run with Pears

OSWESTRY batsman Joe Clarke provided some cheer for Worcestershire this week - and the Morda Road club hope the 19-year-old will now get a run of games for the Pears.

Despite England all-rounder Moeen Ali and Pakistan spin ace Saeed Ajmal both returning, Clarke also got the nod to suggest he will figure in the future.

And he responded by scoring his maiden first class half-century to provide one of the bright spots amid the Pears' innings defeat against Warwickshire in the County Championship division one.

The England under-19 player showed his promise by making exactly 50 in 61 balls in the first innings, hitting nine fours as he top-scored for the side.

Oswestry captain Mark Robinson said:

Wicketkeeper Clarke is likely to get another chance this weekend which means Australian Michael Johnson will continue behind the stumps for Oswestry. The Morda Road men travel to third-placed Bromsgrove as they bid to push away from basement trouble in the Birmingham League division one.

With just eight points separating the bottom five teams, they know a favourable result would make a huge difference.

Berriew boost as Seliaerts returns

We were so consistent says Parry

Rachel Atherton's win came after World Cup champion Manon Carpenter misjudged her landing on the final jump, rode off course and was disqualified.

Swiss rider Emilie Siegenthaler then set the leading time which Emmeline Ragot and Tahnee Seagrave subsequently bettered, only for Atherton to put down a faultless run and claim victory in four minutes, 4.108 seconds, just over three seconds ahead of her fellow Briton.

Atherton, with two wins and a second Atherton, with two wins and a second this term, leads the overall standings with 670 points, ahead of Ragot (585) and Seagrave (446).
